Brouxe Tablet on Westham Armory.

The Association for the Preservation of Virginia Antiquities has placed a bronze tablet on the ruins of the old Westham Armory, which stands on the Westham Armory, which stands on the Scott, at which place he is just now erecting a very handsome home. Ammunitions of war were manufactured at the armory for the Revolutionary War, and it is through the interest and kindness of Mr. Scott, who has shown his patriotism by preserving this ancient landmark, that the association has been able to mark the huilding. Suitable ceremonles will be held in connection with the unveiling of the tablet early in the spring, so that the occasion can be Participated in and enjoyed by all of the members et the association.

The force of the explosion was so terrific that the roof of the great mill was blown off, while the walls split and crumbled. An outburst of name followed on the instant.

Nearly 400 workers were engaged in the building at the time. The bodies of three in or near the bolier room were horrfuly mangled, some of them being thrown into the streets, together with bricks and debris.

Men could be seen at every window with fire raging behind them, frantically appealing for rescue. Fire ladders were quickly at the scene, and many of the men were saved. The scorched clothing and burned hair of those brought down told of the terrible ordeal through which they had gone.

Many of those who were taken to the hospital are suffering from shocking injuries. Some of them have lost legs or arms and others are fearfully burned. pink howers and caught with nose, gays of chrysanthemums and tuile on the bandles. Newport, R. I., November 24.—The navy has been partly successful in its first test of the hydro-aeroplane as an auxiliary to the battleship, One of the sir and water craft succeeded in getting aboard the Ohio with the aid of a crane, but it was determined that some better appliance is needed for launching.

The trial was made with a Burgess-Wright hydro-aeroplane by Lieutennat John Rodgers, aviation instructor at Annapolis, and the idea of the test was to rise above the water from a station, make a flight to and alongside a ship, hoist the machine aboard, put to sea and launch the hydro-aeroplane again with the use of a crane and then to make a flight.

The machine used was a Burgess-Wright aeroplane, with floats fitted on where the wheels usually are. This makes it a hydro-aeroplane. The floats are fitted with rudders for steering the machine while it is on the water. The hydro-aeroplane was launched from the torpedo station at 10 o'clock this morning, with Lleutenant Rodgers as the pilot. After running 200 feet it arose and sailed up the bay. The aviator circled the Missouri at a height of 400 feet and came down very pretity alongside the Ohio. After a fifteenminute flight the aeroplane was easily drawn aboard with the use of a crane. With the aeroplane was easily drawn aboard with the use of a crane. With the aeroplane was easily drawn aboard with the use of a crane and W. Starling Burgess, builder of the machine, aboard. Out in the open sea It was blowing half a gale from the southwest, but untoward conditions were just what were wanted, so all was put in readiness to launch the aeroplane on the lee side of the battle-ship. It was swung over the side on the crane and Lleutenant Rodgers was in his seat ready to start the machine, aboard. Trial of J. B. Hozier.

The second trial of J. B. nozier, of near Hampton, on an indictment alleging attempted assault on Mrs. Frances Gibson, was in progress in the Hustings Court to-day. The alleged assault occurred on the Chesterfield side of the river about noon on July 18. as Mrs. Gibson was returning to her home in the county from the city. At the first trial at the October term of the court the jury disagreed, cloven standing for conviction and one for acquittal. The defendant claimed that he was irresponsible, and had no knowledge of the alleged offense by reason of intoxication. The jury found him guilty of assault and battery and fined him $350 and costs. Hozier paid the fine and was discharged from custody.
